

Thomas Stewart, PhD

Vice Chancellor for Social Justice, Equity, Diversity, & Inclusion – National University System

Author of *Institutionalizing Inclusive Excellence: National University System Leading the Way in Organization and Administration in Higher Education – 3rd Edition

Thomas Stewart is currently Vice Chancellor for Social Justice, Equity, Diversity, and Inclusion at National University System. He is an experienced executive leader, with over 30 years of K-12 and post-secondary experience in education and criminal justice reform, innovation, and transformation. He has done extensive work in providing development opportunities for underserved and underrepresented individuals and communities. Prior to his current position, Dr. Stewart served as President of John F. Kennedy University and Patten University. He has co-founded or lead over 20 schools, universities, or non-profit organizations, including one of the first competency-based non-Title IV participating, regionally accredited universities in the country. He has authored numerous publications on school reform, parent involvement, criminal justice reform, and leading change with grace. Dr. Stewart earned a Doctor of Philosophy in Government from Harvard University and a Bachelor of Arts in Political Science from the University of the District of Columbia.

